Electrical Storm Causes Much Damage in Newport

About 6 o'clock Thursday afternoon this city was visited by the worst electrical storm in many years. The vivid flashes of lightning continued for about half an hour. The Foster Block on Main street was struck, the bolt entering the building through the roof and striking into the photographic studio of A. Allyn Bishop. The appearance of the room a second later would indicate that an instantaneous process for damaging property had been installed.

About the time the lightning was playing pranks in the Bishop studio another bolt struck the main feed wire of the arc lamp service on Main street, opposite the Goodrich Memorial Library, and for a short time the entire length of Main street was full of electricity and brightly illumined. No damage aside from putting the street lights out of commission was done by this bolt. Another bolt struck the Prouty & Miller Mill, which was destroyed.

CAMP DEVENS ONE OF THE FINEST

Drafted New Englanders Will Occupy Most Heathful Camp in Country

Ayer, Mass., July 22.—The big cantonment under construction which is Camp Devens, is soon to be the temporary home of the thousands of New England men just drafted for the new national army is about one-quarter completed, according to estimates of army officers and civilian constructors. The progress made during the first month toward transforming an 8,000 acre tract of bushland into a military city of nearly 40,000 inhabitants is regarded as gratifying, and officially the work was declared today to be "ahead of schedule."

The camp will be one of the most healthful of any of the cantonments of the country, in the opinion of sanitary officers. Its natural features of topography and geographical surroundings are considered ideal, and advanced methods of sanitation are being applied to guard to the utmost the health of the men. Flies and mosquitoes have been made the object of an energetic effort towards elimination with much success. Sickness has been prevented during the first month of preparations among 5,000 workmen and soldiers now here, each one of whom has been instructed in applied individual sanitation, officers said.

To work out a sanitation scheme alone for a city of such proportions would, in peace time, have been regarded as requiring months of study, but engineers, under the direction of Capt. Edward Canfield, U. S. A., a West Point and Massachusetts Institute of Technology graduate, have tackled the problem skillfully and have made visible progress.

Campaign to Increase Membership.

The officers and members of the Orleans County Agricultural Association are soon to launch a campaign to increase the membership of the association. The organization at the present time has a membership of 214, and it is hoped to increase this to a full 1,000 before the close of the society's year, which is in August.

The farmers and those closely related are being thoroughly interested in this movement and are lending their influence to the cause, with the result that an interest is being taken by those whom it is hoped to enroll.

This organization working in conjunction with the Farmers' Exchange, is not only assisting the farmer in the disposition of crops and the purchase of supplies, but by practical demonstrations along varied lines is enabling to educate the agriculturist so that he will be better qualified to pursue his chosen calling.

The agent of the association is H. F. Johnson, who with the manager of the Farmers' Exchange, L. A. Hazen, are alert to the interests of the farmer and are endeavoring to arouse that class to a degree of self-interest in this movement.
